sociated with the President as well in acts of removal from as in appointment to office. It is an act of reclamation of those co-ordinate powers which in 1789 that body had consented by the costing vote of the Vice President alone. It is a solemn and emphatic declaration that the power of removal is neither inherent in the Executive Department nor vested by the Constitution in that department nor vested by the Constitution in that department nor legitimized by precedent. The recognition of the power by the Congress of 1780 was intended to be and was restricted to the removal of faithless, dishonest, and incompetent officers, and did not embrace indiscriminate removal of those, who, on account of their opinions or party predlections might become obnoxious to the lections might become obno indiscriminate removal of those, who, on account of their opinions or party price lections might become obnoxious to the President. The right of that functionary to dismise for conservative reasons for just cause was asserted. The recognition stopped there. The committee believe it to be demonstrable that acts of dismised of capable and faithful incumbents for the gratification of political resenting places for personal friends and favorites, is not only unanistained by the precedent of 1789 and the practice of the Government for the first forty years of its existence, but that in the opinion of those who established the precedent, such acts are arbitrary and diagrent sets of violation of high centalfutional obligations.

This doctrine was thought to be so good and profitable that ten thousand copies were printed, and a very large addition in that day. Mr. Calhoun had no particular senior to sparre the feelings of Andrew Jackson, Hayne, Van Buren, Benton, and other Democratic lights are to be turned on the President to show that Republican Senators are not more unreasonable than Democrats have been.

No Mercy in Them.

The trouble in the coke regions has assumed an aspect which obscures the original issue. At the start the atrikers may have been right or the employees right, or neither altogether right. This is not what the public is thinking about now. The mercilees eviction of women and children is the feature which the press is discussing, and the sympathy is all on the side of the women and children is the feature which the Very than the coke works of Western Penneyl vania tome time before his death, and that his sons are not now, as was reported, the owners of a controlling or of any interest in that property. of the striking miners has been ordered,
and the persons covered by that name, though supposed to be all Pennsylvanians, are not precisely known here.

But be the owners who they may, Pennsylvanianisnor New Yorkers, millionsires still for them. Go to the coke regions yourselves, gentlemen! Look at the facts with your own eyes. See whether any mistaken or flint-hearted management is using unworthily the great power which your proporty gives. Declute for yourselves whether you want to be personally responsible for starving or freezing to death women and children in this winter season, in order to add a little to the profits which you draw from the manufacturing community and the consumers of coke.

Frick & Company may have abundant justice on their side, backed up by all the law in Pennsylvania, but they have stilled any merciful impulses they may have had.
